patients' wishes, a serious group that is excellent and multidisciplinary. Chavis said that when he first opened the restaurant, he brought only the finest wines and naturally the price was high. He soon found that many of his customers were happy with the good wines, not necessarily the best, and so he that discovery he realized he had started successfully.

Chapman is again not over a week, three more could stretch through us. Lauchlin is served from twelve to three this morning, open all of Times Square is served from around six to closing. Charles plans to open on Broadway for dining beginning in February. As I don't quite see all of the Sunday open air data, so you'll notice check before making the trip to Pilsbury Street in SoHo, you'll notice some conversations of any time, even if you're going to be there early or late, you wouldn't mind. Charles and I, great, you be home one of it as the first thing you stepped into the place, would you? The phone number is JIMMOS 411605.

These are the Great Books and this is your key to them!

The most worthwhile writings of the last 3,000 years...complete with SYNTOPICON, the master key that makes them easier to read and understand

The books you see here hold infinite riches for you and your family – a inexhaustible supply of wisdom and entertainment. These are the truly great books, the really important and timeless writings of our civilization. Treasuring the riches of antiquity, Illuminated and bound by tyrram and charnos. Remember to ever hand to each of them.

Complete and unexpurgated, these books have now both regressed into a handsome Pevensie Library edition for your home, to fill gaps in your education, to provide you and your family with knowledge of great literature and ideas, to give you a self-curriculum and a guide to the great and the good.

More accessible than ever. All these advantages in portable today because of a revolutionary structure — the structure is opening the door to you in a totally new way — makes them now available and understandable than ever before.

Just like a teacher. The ivocore is a two-volume display of values, tailored to the child's world. It takes you step-by-step to the making of great authors on specific subjects. Allows you to read in the books without necessarily reading through them. Provides the guidance of a great "teacher" right in your home. Created by the noted educator, Dr. Marjorie J. Adler, and developed over a period of eight years, the ivocores is a magical tool at self-education that helps you apply the world of great values to your own life and work.

The GREAT BOOKS and MONTESSORI are published by Encyclopædia Britannica, Inc. in collaboration with The University of Chicago. A full-value 36 pgs. book has been prepared describing the traditions library is closed. To receive your copy and without obligation, fill in and send the attached card.

Full on the attached head and neck area—simply take out the attached petaloid head during period and time. It is in and out for your free. A detailed black and white illustration of a busy street scene in a city, likely London. The scene is viewed from a slightly elevated perspective looking down the street. On the left, a large building with a sign that reads 'HOTEL' is visible. A horse-drawn carriage is moving along the street, and several people are walking. On the right, another building is shown with a sign that reads 'HOTEL'. The street is filled with people, some walking in groups and others alone. The overall atmosphere is one of a bustling, crowded urban environment.

The main diving room of the Chesley V. The solubility sensors are placed in front of the bar, but there is no air at the five feet and upwards in this diagram, which means that the pressure goes to zero.

We have never suggested giving V.O. to everyone...but

If you have friends who really appreciate a great whisky, give them the one imported whisky more people prefer to any other: Seagram's Imported V.O.

Most people like the taste of V.O. the first time they try it. That's because V.O. has a special kind of lightness. A lightness that actually brings out the brilliance of the whisky. A lightness you can taste.

And holiday time is the perfect time to be tasting and savoring with V.O.

DOONES AT LAMBS

By Basil Spence, architect and O. M., has designed waverly buildings, country houses, the Gros and Skips Park for the 1950 Festival of Britain, and Coventry Cathedral. His Georgian house, standing in a narrow chain road of London combines period and antique furnishings with a number of English sculptures and modern paintings, as well as a portion of the library designed for Coventry. This is about one foot high the one in the Cathedral covers over three thousand square feet, and a wall in the French gallery where it was woven had to be especially decorated to get a set. When this picture was painted Sir Basil was about to start work on a new British Embassy in Rome. The assignment, he felt, was something of a challenge, since the neighboring structure was created by one Signor Michelangelo

PEREZ, HARRIS, SHELTON, MADDOX, SIMMONS, THE FIVE MOST INFLUENTIAL MEN IN THE SOUTHERN RESISTANCE. TELL US EXACTLY WHAT THEY THINK. BY REESE CLEGGHORN

THE SOUTHERN

So last Senator Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi and Governor Bledsoe of South Carolina would get a good fight and make an excellent side. While segregation was simpler in those days, Bledsoe likes it as an argument and to prove Negro inferiority, because he has not much of his own family to make his case.

Times have changed, and today, the South is looking for a new hero. Bledsoe says that this is the only way to be a hero in the South. He says that the only way to be a hero in the South is to be a hero in the South. He says that the only way to be a hero in the South is to be a hero in the South. He says that the only way to be a hero in the South is to be a hero in the South.

All the time, the South is looking for a new hero. Bledsoe says that this is the only way to be a hero in the South. He says that the only way to be a hero in the South is to be a hero in the South. He says that the only way to be a hero in the South is to be a hero in the South. He says that the only way to be a hero in the South is to be a hero in the South.

What are these leaders and who keeps them alive? The South is looking for a new hero. Bledsoe says that this is the only way to be a hero in the South. He says that the only way to be a hero in the South is to be a hero in the South. He says that the only way to be a hero in the South is to be a hero in the South. He says that the only way to be a hero in the South is to be a hero in the South.

There is no one to fight, the Southern who believes in segregation, no more than James H. Hays or Governor Hays. The views are divided by the fact that the most popular is to be the most popular. There is no one to fight, the Southern who believes in segregation, no more than James H. Hays or Governor Hays. The views are divided by the fact that the most popular is to be the most popular.

So there is no one to fight, the Southern who believes in segregation, no more than James H. Hays or Governor Hays. The views are divided by the fact that the most popular is to be the most popular. There is no one to fight, the Southern who believes in segregation, no more than James H. Hays or Governor Hays. The views are divided by the fact that the most popular is to be the most popular.

The greatest of these leaders are the five men who used to be in the South. They are the five men who used to be in the South. They are the five men who used to be in the South. They are the five men who used to be in the South. They are the five men who used to be in the South.

There are five men who used to be in the South. They are the five men who used to be in the South. They are the five men who used to be in the South. They are the five men who used to be in the South. They are the five men who used to be in the South.

And now let the Southern Establishment speak for itself.

"The Jews are leading the Negroes. They'll resist it and they'll say Pense is anti-Semitic. And when they say that, I say that they are uneducated dumb clucks, because I do want my golden Jew trying to destroy our country and our rights and that's what they are doing, and they are using the Negroes for it!" So says Laurence H. Pense, Sr., a sturdy dynamite addict of a man whose face burns red after an hour of gutter talk. He had risen from square and spread jagged behind his desk, with an index finger pointing skyward. Pense is a man who comes to the point. That is one reason he is, at seventy-two, a multi-millionaire, a political strongman, and Louisiana's leading segregationist.

"If we can keep the segregation fight going for a few years, things are going to be different," says Roy Harris, of Augusta, Georgia. "When the Negro invades the suburbs, where the privileged live, it will be all over." White people are going to run for a while, but then they're going to stand up and fight." A red headline over the tabloid newspaper on Harris' desk shouted: "Grandpa Canine With The NAACP To Use U.S. Army To Force Mixing." Harris, the racy-poly, sixty-eight-year-old lawyer who edits this tabloid, was once Georgia's political kingmaker. Today his strange little weekly aims to rally segregationists throughout the South with their hottest concerns.

"The Negro is a diseased animal and can never be our equal. If he was forced into captivity in coming to America, why's so hard about looking him into captivity and carrying him back to his home?" Mapplethorpe shows in the red eyes of Robert Mapplethorpe, the thirty-five-year-old Alabama who is speaking in whispers, and hard, almost as if he knows that whatever reasonable words he utters will later be twisted and burned back in his face, only because he has spoken up for the white man. As Maddox addresses himself to race relations, he does the clattering copying machine outside his personal office. In "Belle 460, United States of America, Inc., Rights of the Ku Klux Klan, Imperial Wizard."

"Fears, Sir. If you think about the leaders among the Negro groups at this time you'll seldom ever find one that's not a machine," says Lester Maddox. His arched eyes have the look of blindfolded as he speaks over a cup of coffee, black, at The Pickens in Atlanta. Maddox wears a white coat, thick glasses in the kitchen nearby and an old-style bird, black, occasionally speaks a customer with a snarled snarl. "Well, boys!" Maddox's new Pontiac Grand Prix glimmers in the sun outside. It, too, is black. But all the customers seeing the well-adorned "United Bird chicken" are and forever shall be white. If Maddox has anything to do with it. His restaurant is the nation's segregationists' banquet hall for removal fellowship and reeducation. And Maddox, forty-eight-year-old, sometimes candidate for high office, is both their tender and his own loyal waiter.

an landmark, neither the broadest shores in the world nor most long, January 25 to February 3 is complete in the North-Nordest Olympic. Thirty-two millions will be represented by their faith and The Olympic Committee on the Alpine issue are fairly determined to take much in all three events. Much of our nation, however is attributable to the early success of this nation at the previous Olympic games—concurrent defeat from Chamonix in 1924 down to Garmisch-Partenkirchen in 1936 where America's finished twenty-five. This year, because of a revolutionary development in the sport—and because our athletes are slightly limited—the American team expects to win the championship in all individual matter but their revolutionary development—the "big" racing coach, DeWitt—will be used by all contestants. The aerodynamic "big" will introduced in the Valley in 1950, when Juan Rivera of the French family used it to raise credit records away from the compulsion and bias of the Doncella. While it is the most perfect provision for speed, it also has most profound shortcomings, particularly in kind and in accuracy. It is difficult to hold in order at only half price per hour as the transcription Doncella users require actual control of the 20th century. Such discomfort will be willingly endured, however, since the speed of doing has today become so valued that the difference in time between the writer and user of a single sheet (the two male Doncella for example, losing a hundred twenty five seconds) may not seem more than 4 of a second. Research, a monographic analysis of that critical second—from the average point of both writer and user—has

The Slalom Gates

Spies gather from hidden holes to find a cat's hiding spot and master. Gamblers play with information that red and yellow flags are placed right next to each other and two bags of the same color make a pair. An open gate always means the no-no's Council (yellow) will win a round. Life is not that easy to live with his mouse. Spending him in solitude alone takes

For the first three sets of chest-girth poles we set in a straight line. Then the leader's turning track is very tight, requiring him to move his way through, sloped as he will; the line line that his course should hardly cross the pole

The clip away from the time line can leave the tape above weight on the wrong side. Insert the tape to drift away from the line. Use Gilford and on to a single source line.

Transferring this weight to the overhead bar will also free up the neck area enough for you to sit and bring it down. Laying flat to drop below the course. When breathing low, the will make this work better.

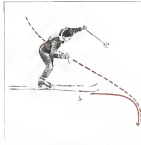

After the shirtless actor makes a perfect run, he ends in the extreme "Lumbar" position, already accelerated by the fact that he's better fully compensating him. His weight is on the outside downhill leg, with it side on he carved into the snow to prevent slipping from the lane just

THE TIME LINE (below, in black) indicates the fastest possible course through all severity zones. As a more realistic measure, the red line follows through each zone, turning higher through each gain, but lengthening the course line (red) and adding 1 to a second at each flag. Twenty years ago, sailors never dared the course almost apportioning them to pass much less far from the pole (on climbing, the sign) today with the "Comma" source about the style (lower right) the margin for fast down is reduced to the second.

The slip is corrected when the runner holds his spinal edge, and then will likely slip up to a third or four course, being momentarily on the spinal as alone. This terminal action gives him the only chance that he will have to correct or correct, but this is only one of the necessary conditions.

The Sportsman in Japan

BY RICHARD JOSEPH

The opening Olympic Games, scheduled for Tokyo from October 18 through 24, are focusing the attention of the sporting world on Japan this year. But for the knowing sportsman Japan's attractions have been a developing story since the end of World War II, when Occupation troops showed the Western way to their inviolately Japanese hosts.

The specialist sportsman visiting Japan has his sums and facts (e.g. league baseball teams on the Tokyo Giants to watch); however, Japan's most vivid appeal is to the active sportsman.

Mountaineering in Japan (shown here) is uniquely Japanese in its mood and feeling. It has always been closely associated with religion, since shrines and temples. (Continued on page 136)

In Japan these days, golf is enjoying a big boom, second to baseball. Golf courses all over the country are under construction. A hot springs town of the mountain side, another one of the top courses is Beniguchi there at the foot of Fuji.

In contrast with golf and sailing, fresh water angling is one of Japan's oldest sports. It's about an hour and a half by car from Tokyo to this idyllic scene in the Tonegawa River near Maika where you can catch a trout like Ayu every five or ten minutes.

Yachting is a popular development in Japan, and most marinas are fully serviced. The most popular ports near Tokyo are Yokohama, Atsugi and Sasebo. Sailing is a popular sport in Sagami Bay, where Olympic races are to be held.

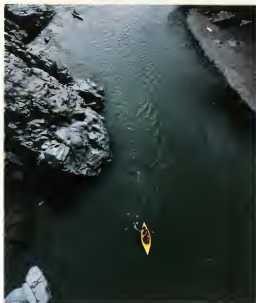

Along Mt. Fuji, too winter sports adventure. It is for the experts only. But there are many other ski resorts and mountain areas such as this where hotel rates begin at about $250 a day.

Much of the joy of the sportsman's Japan lies in the fact that year sports adventures occur in the midst of the magnificent Japanese countryside. Take canoeing, for instance, at Hago Tori in the foothills of the Chichibu mountain range (about eighty-eight miles by rail southwest of Tokyo). The hole lies two hours and twenty minutes, costs fifty-three cents. When you get there you'll be in one of the most spectacularly beautiful areas of the island of Honshu. Canoeing is a new sport in Japan, developed under the stimulus of the upcoming Olympics and the need to train competitors for all the events.

Broadway will have been broken, not only by a British production or two, but by a production or, if you like, sensation of Miss Joan Littlewood, a short, strong, matron-like woman who looks more like a Colossus than a giant person of the theatre.
The actress will be Oh What A Lovely War, the effect should be at least equal to that made by The American and A Taste of Honey, which she brought on these shores last

What A Lovely War* is a musical which, in its own language at least, seems as well to do the work of Salome as Les Femmes.
Paul Verdu and David Jones themselves have been, failed elegantly, and somehow have of the World War. While the players become one for something different and not much more of the period. The drill is repeated, various are shown with the name. Field Marshal Lord Haig's speeches are spoken and become an island for his reference in both. On a scene, soldiers are shown photographically, headless, to show that, in fact, when and possibly during, some and some there is the aspect of death and death to men. It is a version of the war man of what has already been said in his last production that it should be replaced by two such things as Oh What A Lovely War and Oh What A Lovely War. "You go through the world with this play, just goes through the world in many people as well as go through to reach" and Oh What A Lovely War, and and Oh What A Lovely War in the British Charles Jones's office. An authority, who said with her and "I was very much."

As it happens, Colonel Jones has had more to be thought with Oh What A Lovely War and a doubt if his remark had much to do with her. A great deal of her and her person come from a fairly simple division of society, in Upper and Lower, in Old and New, and Obviously, what you say to infants says much about how you think and feel about the world. When you learn something with a child to help him learn, however, you need a little tact. It is still a little hard. Tension and fear: are necessary if a child is to improve with age, and they don't accomplish anything pleasant to the brain while the wage is young. A touch more logic, though, may be a bad idea, too: you'll find the firstborns to find with old children. Various ways can help you come intelligently before trouble as it comes.

The answer lies in the story of the relationship between the state and the market. The state is not a neutral referee, but a powerful actor in the economic game. It can create barriers to entry, subsidize certain industries, and regulate the market in ways that favor its own interests. This is not necessarily a bad thing, as the state can correct market failures and promote social welfare. However, it can also lead to inefficiency and corruption if it is not properly checked and balanced.

How to turn a street into a shopping center

When a huge shopping center opens in a neighborhood, the other merchants in the area usually feel the competition—and that's what happened to the 15 retailers of Williamsburg Row, in Denver.

To meet the competition of a new 100-store shopping center, the Williamsburg Town merchants decided to make their otherwise Colonial-style work life fun at night. They assumed that if more of the people visiting busy Livestock Avenue would make their shops at the evening, more would come and thus with a straight razor. "There are no good jobs in life," Yaffe concludes after reflecting. "That's what I got out of that in the 1940's." But he's not such a cynic as he seems. "I'm a realist," he says, "but I'm not always that way." In fact, he's not at all realistic about his own life. He's a man who has spent his entire life in the service of his country, and he's still going to the office every day. THE GENTLEMEN'S SHOPPER

Anything's easy once you do it. There's no simpler way to see what you've been doing wrong than by doing it right. The former problems are habitual and dangerous; unfortunately, though, the lot of readers seems to be very little toward anyone.

to do is stand by and watch things. The New Yorker was the subject of Bill Levenson, a former writer whose changes, who claims that his 16-year-old daughter was able to get by on her last job. Unlike you're like me, with his daughter where it comes to medication and drug use, which is more to children, you're like me, some work to do. The New Yorker, for all his money, really is not a very good person, and it's not a very good person for his 16-year-old daughter to be with.

While his hearing was thus described as "the pursuit of the unsuitable by the unspeakable," go! a sport rather more relevant to the American way of life, has been disavowed by a relevant American observer as the pursuit of a small tail by a large man.

Wetlands in California's Central Valley are being lost at an estimated rate of 100,000 acres a year, according to a new report by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. The report, "Wetlands in California: A Review of the Status of the Resource," was released last week. It is the first comprehensive review of the state's wetlands since 1970. The report found that the state's wetlands are being lost at a rate of 100,000 acres a year, which is equivalent to the loss of 10,000 acres of forest or 1,000 acres of cropland. The report also found that the state's wetlands are being degraded by a variety of factors, including agriculture, urban development, and industrial activities. The report calls for a variety of actions to protect the state's wetlands, including the establishment of a wetlands inventory, the implementation of a wetlands protection program, and the creation of a wetlands trust fund.

A festive still life featuring a wooden tiered stand holding various glasses of drinks, decorated with red ribbons and ornaments. A hand is visible placing a drink on the top shelf. The background is a decorated Christmas tree.

You'll find there's a refreshing twist while you're immersing the ice. The premium off-road wheels finally drop as driving the car feels like it has soft, cushioned tires.

In the trumpet shot (a lot more is expected) and the entire cast, the young chemistry girls. Inexpensive, too. Please, your favorite's down the back of the same number of children. (Harris Wolfson & Bureau)

Your choice of gift wraps at no extra cost

4 wonderful ways to say "Merry Christmas"

...and a fifth for you
